

Dear Sir or Madam:

Telemarketers are as annoying (if not more so) than pop up ads on the internet... they interrupt dinner, call after 8 o'clock in the evening, waking small children; are rude, disrespectful, and have no sense of propriety or common courtesy. Also, the majority of the time, they do not even speak fluent or proper English, so that you can hardly even communicate with them... A person's home is their safe haven, away from the trials of work, school, and the idiots who can't drive... we should not have to be submitted to the invasion of our privacy by someone calling to get us to subscribe to a newspaper, or sign up for a credit card we don't want, or to buy aluminum siding when we live in an apartment complex!!! Please keep the Do Not Call Law in effect!!!
